Subject: polar bear interview

FYI

The reporter from the Sunday Times of London never called me back after I told him that I may be able to swing 5 minutes with the Governor.

Governor-

May I use Larry's response should he need something in writing tonight?

"My approval ratings have nothing to do with it. Nor do 'political smarts' and independence. Nor does anyone's prediction that the listing is inevitable. As the governor of Alaska, I believe the listing is premature, a misuse of the law and a wrong answer to the problem of global warming. Whether that is a popular stand does not matter; I believe it is the right stand. And regardless whether polar bears are listed, I have a responsibility to speak out and comment during the public process. I disagree if some think I am wasting my time; it's never a waste of time to debate important public policy issues."

Governor,

I am happy to forward you some ANSCA-oriented bullets to use for your call-in to the Board meeting at 2:00 tomorrow (800-369-0860, code 130047#). Today is extremely nutty for us all, so I won't get to it before tonight (don't tell my wife I am working on this on V's Day evening!). So unless I hear back from you to the contrary, I will simply plan on pulling something (simple) together and shooting it your way for you tonight. Tom and I will be getting together late this afternoon to plan our talk.

Bruce

PS, just finished war-gaming with Marty/Kurt for Fagan. I sold my soul and played Fagan (of course to make for true debate prep, I conjured an intelligent Fagan). They are READY.

"Why would the governor of Alaska, with her reputation for political smarts and independence, risk her 85% approval ratings fighting against the registration of polar bears as an endangered species - when all indicators are it will happen sooner or later?" I suppose supplementary questions include what practical steps will she take to maintain her position - more DC lobbying? - and what would it cost Alaska if the bears are protected over the next few weeks or months?

- DNR has scheduled a hearing that will begin March 3 to allow the Point Thomson unit owners; ExxonMobil, BP, Chevron and Conoco, to present their ideas about alternative remedies to unit termination.

- In her December 26 order, Judge Gleason said that DNR correctly rejected the unit owners' plan of development.

- The judge also told DNR to provide the unit owners with an opportunity to argue about any other remedy besides terminating the unit, that may be appropriate in light of the rejection of their plan of development and consistent with the law.

- The Commissioner of DNR will hear their arguments, look at any written materials they submit and decide what the appropriate remedy is for failure to submit an adequate plan of development.

- DNR will make a decision and send the case back to the judge by the June 15 deadline she set.

Also-I called Doherty (ADN editor). He is having the Bill White, who originally wrote the story, call me back, but he said it sounds like they need to do a correction and may send someone to the hearing. The correction will be that it is a hearing, not a meeting, and it is with all of the unit owners, not just EM.

Subject: Pred Control OpEd To Run Tomorrow

I'm happy to report that your OpEd on predator control is scheduled to run in tomorrow's (Friday, Feb. 15) edition of The Hill.
It will run in the print edition and be posted online (www.TheHill.com)

This is the audience that we were hoping to reach with this piece.

Background from the website: The Hill is known among those who influence policy as a "must read" in print and online. It signals the important issues of the moment. In an environment filled with political agendas, The Hill stands alone in delivering solid, non-partisan and objective reporting on the business of Washington, covering the inner-workings of Congress, as well as the nexus between politics and business. The Hill serves to connect the players, define the issues and influence the way Washington's decision makers view the debate. The Hill has a print circulation of above 21,000, more than any other Capitol Hill publication. It is aimed at the 100 senators, 435 House members, 40,000 aides and tens of thousands in the influence industry whose work affects the lives of all Americans.

My name is Jaren Hoffman, and I am the Vice-Chairman of Alaska College Republicans. I am interested in bringing Congressman Ron Paul, and Mike Gravel to Alaska. I am not a ardent supporter of Congressman Paul or former Senator Gravel, but this is primarily for the student body. Subject: College Access Challenge Grant Program

February 15, 2008

Governor Sarah Palin
State of Alaska
P.O. Box 110001
Juneau, AK 99811-0001

Dear Governor Palin:

Last week, you received a letter from the assistant secretary of the U.S. Department of Education's Office of Postsecondary Education, Diane Auer Jones, announcing the College Access Challenge Grant (CACG) Program. CACG is a new formula-grant program designed to foster partnerships among federal, state, and local governments and philanthropic organizations through matching challenge grants that are aimed at increasing the number of low-income students who are prepared to enter and succeed in postsecondary education.

CACG funds will be awarded to states based on a statutory formula that is determined by the number of people living below the poverty level (enclosed is a tentative allocation table for your reference). For FY 2008, the minimum award is $330,000.

While the final application package will not be disseminated until June 2008, the federal government is encouraging states to begin their planning now. States will have approximately 45 days to apply for funding as part of this grant program.

A regional approach is often a more effective and efficient way of tackling major issues, especially those related to college preparation, access, and success. In an effort to assist states in the Western region with the CACG application process and grant-management responsibilities, the Western Interstate Commission for Higher Education (WICHE) is contacting its 15 member states to gauge their interest in applying for funds as a consortium. Some states might be interested in a long-term arrangement, while others might want to be a part of the consortium early on and eventually take over the management of the grant on their own. WICHE is willing to be flexible with the specific arrangements, in order to meet each state's needs.

WICHE has extensive experience with such arrangements. For example, for five years, WICHE and the Colorado Department of Education managed and administered the federally funded Western Consortium for Accelerated Learning Opportunities, in which nine Western states partnered to work to increase the successful participation of low-income students in advanced placement courses and tests. As the administrative agency, WICHE helped to alleviate some of the pressures of grant implementation and at the same time provided states with a network of colleagues through which they could share ideas and strategies for success.

If you are interested in being part of a College Access Challenge Grant Consortium administered by WICHE or if you would like to discuss this further, please contact me at dlonganecker@wiche.edu or 303.541.0201 by Friday, March 21, 2008. I look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,

Governor-

The London Times has an interesting question to pose to you-

"Why would the governor of Alaska, with her reputation for political smarts and independence, risk her 85% approval ratings fighting against the registration of polar bears as an endangered species - when all indicators are it will happen sooner or later?" I suppose supplementary questions include what practical steps will she take to maintain her position - more DC lobbying? - and what would it cost Alaska if the bears are protected over the next few weeks or months?

They would like 10 minutes with you this afternoon. Thoughts? (They have a huge circulation)

Mike,
We heard Rep. Guttenberg is trying to file a bill by Monday (personal bill deadline) related to merit/needs based scholarships. I called Rep. Guttenberg and asked whether he might be open to jointly filing it with a Republican who had expressed interest. He said he was so I'm working to put Rep. Wes Keller together with him on this project. (Wes had told me that he was very supportive of merit scholarships and I'm hoping he can provide a more conservative balance to what Guttenberg wants to do.)

Rep. Meyer had already expressed interest in funding such an effort in stages so this might all dovetail into a House led effort. Just wanted you to have the heads up this is percolating in the background.

Governor,
I asked Denby for a summary of actions by the board of fish at their recent meeting, which is below. We are meeting tomorrow to discuss what we can do to improve the situation in the Mat-Su valley, since they are unhappy with the results of the board meeting. Commercial fishermen in Cook Inlet are pleased with the results, although they won't be fully satisfied. Mat-Su sport fishermen benefited by declaration of Susitna River sockeye salmon as a stock of concern, but there were no further restrictions imposed on the drift net fishery as Mat-Su advocates were requesting.
The department has reinstated the Deshka coho weir after numerous requests by Mat-Su legislators.
Also, the board was very pleased with the decision to have the Habitat Division moved back to ADF&G; there was even applause from the audience. We have received a flood of very positive e-mails, letters, and calls on habitat as well.

Cora:

We are near the end of the Upper Cook Inlet salmon meeting of the Board of Fisheries. The following are the main actions that they have taken (including the first four, which I reported to you yesterday):

1. Prohibition of personal use fishing for sockeye in the lower Kenai River (which occurs in July) from boats powered by 2-stroke engines (other than direct fuel injection engines); this parallels action recently approved by the Governor and DNR for the middle Kenai River.

2. Susitna River sockeye salmon have been declared a stock of yield concern, in answer to requests and proposals from the Mat-Su region.

3. Extension of the Upper Cook Inlet eastside set gill net fishery from a previous closure date of August 10 to a new closure date of August 15, with only two regular (12-hour) open periods allowed during the Aug 11-15 time period.

4. Liberalized sport fishing retention for early Kenai River Chinook salmon (for fish 20-28 inches only).

5. Clarification that managing salmon fisheries in Upper Cook Inlet for the escapement goals (whichever ones are applicable: biological, sustainable, optimum or inriver) shall take priority over other elements of regulatory management plans such as prescribed closed windows and limits to extra emergency order open periods.

6. Granting the department authority to raise or lower sport fishing bag limits for sockeye incrementally by emergency order (e.g., rather than by prescribed steps, from 3 per day to either zero or 6 per day currently in the regulations for Russian River in the Kenai).

In sum, the eastside set gill net fishermen and the drift gill net fishermen gained some of the clarity in fishery management plans that they have advocated for during the past several years and the eastside set gill net fishermen gained some fishing time in mid August. Hopefully this will reduce some of the rhetoric that we've heard from these groups over the past year or so.

The Mat Su sport fishermen benefited by declaration of Susitna River sockeye salmon as a stock of concern, but there were no specific regulatory restrictions imposed on the central district drift gill net fishery (to expressly allow for passage of Susitna sockeye) as Mat Su advocates were requesting. While the stock of concern declaration will be seen positively by Mat Su advocates, they will not be satisfied, thus we will likely hear criticism that the Board did not go far enough to protect Susitna River stocks.

The liberalization of sport fishing rules will be taken positively by sport fishing advocates, but they will remain disappointed that prescriptions for closed windows were found to be of lower priority than management for escapement goals.

Just so you (and the Governor) know, the department has also decided internally, and we've let the public know, that we are going to reinstate the coho portion of the Deshka River weir program (i.e., the notorious $55,000) from our federal sport fish funding sources. Also, the Board was very pleased that the Governor decided to have the Habitat Division moved back to ADF&G; there was even applause from the audience.

Let me know if you need more, DL.
